MONTI OSSENFORT

GM PROFILE

- While still on a smaller sample, Ossenfort has drafted the highest rate of players at premium positions (79%), the 5th highest rate of Power 5 players (93%), the 3rd oldest average age of player drafter (22.9 yo) and the 3rd most athletic player profile (8.6 avg RAS).
- Ossenfort has leaned into more athleticism so far as well and has not drafted a single player with a RAS <7.2 in the first 150 picks. It should be noted that the Cardinals did not draft a single player in the first three rounds last year that even registered a RAS score.
- Ossenfort has made seven top 50 career picks and all of them have been on premium positions. None were older than 22.6 yo and five were 22.0 yo or younger.

ERIC DECOSTA

GM PROFILE

- DeCosta does not have a bunch of tendencies when drafting and has shown that he just likes to draft good football players, no matter the position. He has hit huge on guys at non-premium positions early like S Kyle Hamilton and C Tyler Lindenbaum. And then last year once again went after a non-premium position at Safety with Malaki Starks in round one.
- He does tend to avoid older players in the draft, and especially early. Among 13 1st and 2nd round picks, only three (Linderbaum, Flowers, Oweh) were drafted over the age of 22.0 years old. 77% of his early selections have been guys under the age of 22, 2nd highest rate among active GMs.
- Very few GMs drafts players without meeting them first more often than Decosta. Only 10% of his 63 picks since 2019 have met with the Ravens in the pre-draft process. Last year, only 5th round pick Carson Vinson met with the team prior to being selected.
- For someone with the reputation like DeCosta, he has not hit on as many picks as we'd like to imagine. He has sung and missed on early round guys like Oweh, Ojabo, Dobbins and Bateman. Starks and Green were modest disappointments last season as rookies. When a majority of his recent big wins have come on guys at non-premium positions like Linderbaum at C and Hamilton at S, it reduces the overall impact of his drafts.

GM PROFILE

- Beane had been a bit contrarian when it comes to athleticism (RAS) early in drafts but reversed course last year his top three picks and four of his top five selections were extremely athletic. Hairston, Jackson, Sanders and Hancock generated elite level athletic testing (9.3+ RAS) numbers. He also went very defensive heavy with each of his first five picks on the defensive side of the ball.
- Beane has gone 13/13 in drafting Power 5 players in the top two rounds of the draft since 2019, however from rounds 3+, his 72% rate ranks third lowest among GMs. He has hit on later round non-Power 5 players like Khalil Shakir (5th round) and Christian Benford (6th round).
- He gets a big bump for the Josh Allen selection but based on other players drafted in those same rounds, his overall draft resume on a per pick basis is as good as any GM in the last 10 years. Besides Allen, Beane has big hits with mid/late round selections like Dion Dawkins, Matt Milano, James Cook, Khalil Shakir and Christian Benford.
- Beane has met with four of their last five top picks during the draft process. Only TE Dalton Kincaid in 2023 they did not meet with prior to drafting him.

DAN MORGAN

GM PROFILE

- Morgan has only completed two drafts so far, but he has already shown a propensity to draft younger players (22.2 yo avg age 2nd youngest among GMs) and those from bigger schools (100% Power 5 selections).
- Morgan has made 15 career draft selections and all of them have been from bigger name schools. Nine of his 15 selections have been on players from the SEC. Five of his six top 3 round selections and seven of his nine top 4 round picks have been on players from the SEC.
- Only 45% of his selections after round 2 have been on premium position players, the lowest rate among active GMs.

RYAN POLES

GM PROFILE

- Poles has really attacked the better athletes high in the draft. Seven of his eight top 65 selections with a RAS score have been on guys with a RAS of 8.9 or higher. He has the 3rd highest average RAS selections in the top two rounds of any GM since 2016. RBs Trestan Ebner and Kyle Monangai are the only players that Poles has drafted with a RAS of less than 7.0.
- He has shown a good tendency to attack the premium positions with his early picks and then less so late. 12 of his 14 top three round picks have been on players at premium positions. Eight of his 10 picks from round 6-7 have been on non-premium position players.
- Last year was the first time the Bears selected a player (Loveland) in round one without meeting them in the pre-draft process.

DUKE TOBIN

GM PROFILE

- Tobin is really living off back-to-back monster drafts in 2020-2021 with Joe Burrow, Ja'mar Chase, Tee Higgins and Logan Wilson selections. Otherwise, the most recent drafts are as bad as any GM in the NFL. You could argue that since 2022, DJ Turner and Chase Brown are the only quality, sure-fire starters that Tobin has drafted in that span.

- Tobin has concentrated a lot on non-premium positions in rounds 2+ especially at Safety and TE. 8/12 round 3+ selections in the last two drafts have been on non-premium positions. In fact, all five last season went to guys at LB, RB and interior OL. Since 2021, only Brown, K Evan McPherson and G Dylan Fairchild last season are true starters.

- The Bengals and Tobin have a very specific type with their first-round picks. Five straight first round picks were drafted at age 21.6 or younger and if you exclude QB Joe Burrow (age less of a factor generally for QBs), six straight 1st round picks have been 21.6 yo or younger. In addition, five straight 1st round picks have been tremendous athletes with 9.0+ RAS figures and all 12 Tobin 1st round picks have come from either the Big 10, Big 12, SEC or ACC. Among his last nine 1st round picks, five were from the SEC and three from the Big 10.

- Among 24 top two round selections in his career, Tobin has yet to draft a player outside of a Power conference school.

ANDREW BERRY

GM PROFILE

- Berry has consistently drafted the youngest players year after year. Among his 44 career draft selections, the average age of these players has been a league low of 22.0 at the time of the draft. 55% of his selections were under the age of 22, also the highest rate in the NFL.
- Last season's 2nd round selection of LB Carson Schwesinger was the first time among 8 round 1 and 2 selections where Berry drafted a player over the age of 22.0. Barely. Schwesinger was 22.2 yo at the time of the draft.
- Among his 8 top two round picks, Berry has not drafted a player with an available RAS under 8.4.
- It is a wonder that Berry is still employed this long considering based on average annual value vs median players in those same rounds, Berry has performed as a bottom two GM among active GMs. From round 3 on, he is the single worst active GM in the NFL right now based on expectations.
- Cleveland has met with their last two top picks (Graham, Hall) in the pre-draft process. Berry has only been a GM for the Browns with three first round picks (Graham, Newsome, Wills) and they met with each of them prior to the draft.

GM PROFILE

- Will McClay is VP of Player Personnel and many sight him as the true GM of this team fwiw. But its Jerry's team.
- Whomever is making the final draft decisions for Dallas, the Cowboys have been one of the better drafting teams over the last 5+ seasons. Only Holmes in Detroit has drafted a higher percentage of Pro Bowl players than the Cowboys and only Brandon Beane has generated a greater value than median for players in the same rounds of the draft.
- They have really excelled at finding mid-late round gems and lead the NFL in most Pro Bowlers drafted from rounds 3 on. However, recent drafts have not been as positive as he'd like. He has only found four starters in the last three drafts (25 picks).
- Dallas has invested heavily in both the OL and DL with six of their seven highest picks in the last three drafts coming from those positions.
- Dallas has drafted a player under the age of 22 in six straight 1st rounds. Four straight 1st round picks have come on either the OL or DL.

GEORGE PATON

GM PROFILE

- We don't truly know how much power Sean Payton wields in draft decisions compared to the named GM George Paton, but for this exercise we are assuming its Paton receiving the credit.
- He has certainly hit on his share of solid draft picks in his time as GM and has selected the 2nd highest rate of All Pro's among active GMs. He ranks #1 among active GMs in average annual value in picks made in rounds 1 and 2. He has not been as successful with later round picks from a hit rate standpoint but does have standout selections for guys like CB Riley Moss and ED Jonathan Cooper from round 3 on.
- Patton does seem to be averse to mediocre/poor athletes in the last few drafts. Among 14 selections in the last three drafts with a registered RAS score, none scored below a 6.5 and 11/14 scored 8.5+.
- The Broncos (Payton/Patton) do a good job of not foreshadowing many of their selections in the draft. They have met with only 3 of 38 draft picks since 2021, prior to the draft under Patton (Nix, Moss, Bonitto).

BRAD HOLMES

GM PROFILE

- No GM has drafted a higher rate of Pro Bowl players since 2016 than Holmes (19%) and All Pros (14%)
- Holmes has typically leaned younger in early rounds but then took nearly 24 yo Tate Ratledge in the 2nd round last season.
- 6 of his 7 first round selections have been players age 22.2 yo or less including Aiden Hutchinson, Penei Sewell and Jahmyr Gibbs.
- In fact, Sewell, Gibbs, Terrion Arnold and Jameson Williams are four of the youngest first round picks since 2020.
- Holmes also loves drafting big school players higher in the draft. 21/23 selections made in the top four rounds for Holmes have been from Power 5 schools and you can argue that the two non-Power 5 players (Brodrick Martin from WKY and Giovanni Manu from British Columbia) have been his two worst so far. All 13 of his top two round picks have come from OSU. Georgia, Alabama, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Oregon, Kentucky and Washington.

BRIAN GUTEKUNST

GM PROFILE

- Gutekunst has tilted toward very good athletes in round one and among his eight picks in his GM career, all of them with available RAS have generated a RAS of 8.4 or higher. Last year's top pick, WR Matthew Golden, did not generate a RAS score but did fly at the combine with a 4.29 40. Prior to Golden, five straight and six of the last seven 1st round picks had a RAS of >9.0 including Jordan Morgan (9.2) in 2024.
- Gutekunst has done an excellent job of finding gems from schools outside of the power conferences like Jordan Love, Christian Watson, Tucker Kraft, Romeo Doubs and MVS.
- He also tilts toward not caring much about the age of prospects. 10% of his selections have been on players age 24 yo or older. In the first two rounds, the average age of his selections (22.4 yo) ranks as 5th highest in the league.

GM PROFILE

- Nick Caserio has made 41 draft selections in his short GM career and 100% of those picks have gone to players at Power 5 schools. He is the only GM who can say that. 25 of his 41 total picks have been made on guys from the SEC and Big 10.
- Caserio and the Texans have not made a first-round selection since 2023 and only four in his short career. All four were very young and none older than 21.7 yo.
- After eschewing highly athletic players in recent drafts he uncharacteristically drafted three players last season with his first three selections whom all registered a RAS of 9.3 or higher.

CHRIS BALLARD

GM PROFILE

- Ballard is polar opposite when it comes to athleticism and age in the draft. His 82 career picks have resulted in one of the highest average RAS of 8.5. 50% of all his drafted players have posted a 9.0+ RAS, one of the highest marks as well. All six of his last 1st and 2nd round picks with a RAS score, posted at least a 9.3 RAS.
- There have been 82 players drafted in the last four drafts with a RAS of 9.75 or higher and Ballard has drafted 13% of them alone.
- Anthony Richardson is the only one of Ballard's six first round picks that Ballard has met with prior to the draft. He did not meet with last year's #1 pick Tyler Warren.
- He has met with only 2/11 2nd round picks as well as he did not meet with last year's 2nd round pick, JT Tuimoloau. Overall, Ballard has only met with 13% of all his total draft selections since 2019 and only one player (5th round pick Anthony Gould in 2025) has met with the Colts in the last two drafts during the process.

BRETT VEACH

GM PROFILE

- Veach has made six 1st round picks in his career and five of the six were under 22 yo at the time of the draft. Last year, Josh Simmons at 22.1 yo was barely the one exception but generally speaking, he tilts much more toward the younger prospect in round one.
- Veach has been one of if not the best GMs in recent drafts at finding really quality interior OL. He has hit on guys like C Creed Humphrey and G Trey Smith, both in the 2021 draft. KC has drafted at least one OL in each draft under Veach.
- 75% of Veach's picks since 2019 have been on a player from a Power 5 school, 2nd lowest among GMs. He has nailed some recently on guys like Rashee Rice, L'Jarius Sneed and Josh Williams. All three of those players also scored very highly in athletic testing with a 9.3 RAS or higher.
- Veach has drafted a premium positions player in all nine of KCs last three drafts inside the top three rounds. This comes after the Clyde Edwards-Helaire debacle in 2020.

GM PROFILE

- Only two drafts for Hortiz so far so there is a limited sample to go off of. He has made some excellent selections so far with Joe Alt, Ladd McConkey, Cam Hart, Tarheeb Still and Orande Gadsden all producing well above median round expectations.
- So far, Hortiz has selected four round 1 and 2 players and each one has scored very well athletically. All four registered at least a 9.2 RAS. Maybe coincidentally, all four top two round picks have been on offense.
- Hortiz has only met with three players (Alt, Colson, Rice) prior to drafting his 18 players so far and all of them came in 2024.

LES SNEAD

GM PROFILE

- Snead has drafted the oldest players on average in rounds 1-2 since 2016. Snead and the Rams also don't attend the Senior Bowl or the Combine and use their own GPS tracking system to evaluate speed and athleticism. That has led to the Rams finding diamonds in the rough with players who have scored poorly in conventional athletic scores. Snead has drafted the lowest average RAS scores of any active GM.
- For example, Puka Nacua, Taylor Rapp, Jordan Fuller, Kyren Williams and Cobie Durant all posted RAS scores under 6.0 and dropped in the draft due to poor testing. Only Rapp was drafted prior to round 4.
- To Snead's credit, he went young late in the 2023 draft and grabbed one of the best late round values in the last decade in 5th round pick Puka Nacua in 2023 (21.9 yo).
- The Rams are very sneaky with how they conduct player interviews so the publicly available information on player visits is always at a minimum. They have not drafted a single first round player that is publicly available when it comes to interviews.

GM PROFILE

- Wolf has only two drafts under his belt so not a ton of sample size to make any stark conclusions yet.
- It has only been 19 total selections, but he has drafted the lowest rate of players under the age of 22 yo (16%) among active GMs. And eight of 19 players age 23 yo or older. However, it should be noted that his two first round selections, Drake Maye and Will Campbell, were on the young side (<22 yo).

MICKEY LOOMIS

GM PROFILE

- Loomis loves drafting highly athletic players. Nearly 80% of all his selections who worked out prior to the draft, posted a RAS of >8.0 since 2019.
- Among 10 1st round picks since 2017, the Saints have not drafted a single player with a RAS of less than 8.0. All but Chris Olave and Kelvin Banks generated a 9.0+ RAS in that stretch.
- While Loomis is more of an outlier GM when it comes to athleticism, he also has drafted the highest percentage of players outside of the Power 5. Nearly 25% of all his selections since 2016 have been on players outside of a big conference. Loomis is likely living off past success with big hits on Terron Armstead (Ark Pine Bluff) and Trey Hendrickson (FL Atlantic), but he has not has as much luck in that department lately. To that point, he only drafted Power 5 players last year.
- Nine straight 1st and 2nd round selections have been on players at premium positions.
- In a bit of an oddity, Loomis has not selected a 1st round player whom he officially met with prior to the draft since 2015 (Stephon Anthony).

JOE SCHOEN

GM PROFILE

- With John Harbaugh at the helm, Schoen will run the draft but his power is surely lower than in prior drafts.
- Schoen correctly prioritizes premium positions early in drafts as 12 of his 14 picks in the first three rounds have gone to premium position players. That's the 2nd highest rate among active GMs. However, from rounds four on, he goes in an opposite direction and his 41% premium position rate is 2nd lowest among GMs.
- He has drafted a Safety in three of his last four drafts, an RB in three straight and three TEs in the last four seasons. The Safety and RB position are particularly interesting considering he likely was chasing his losses in FA with Xavier McKinney and Barkley leaving. I will say the focus on these non-premium spots later in drafts has led to a solid hit rate.
- He also loves to draft elite athletes in the 1st round. Of the four 1st round picks, who tested (Nabers, Thibodeaux and Banks), all generated a RAS of at least 9.6.
- All nine of Schoen's top two round picks have come from the Big 10 or SEC.
- Schoen has had an official meeting with all five of his original #1 picks pre-draft. He did not meet with Jaxson Dart last year but they traded back in to make that selection.

HOWIE ROSEMAN

GM PROFILE

- Howie clearly leans into the pro analytics tendencies but is not particularly easy to pin down. Since the Eagles are often drafting later in round one, he tends to take good players who fall to his spot.
- Andre Dillard is the only non-QB player Howie has drafted over age 22.8 in round one since 2013. Considering that failure along with Danny Watkins (26.5) in 2011, it is clear Howie will likely fade older players this high.
- Howie's biggest misses in the 1st round in his career have come from either older players or poor athletes. Four of his five worst 1st round misses have come from the players who tested the worst with a RAS of 7.5 or less (Agholar, Reagor, Marcus Smith and Watkins).
- Since 2019, none of his drafted players have generated a RAS of <5.1. Last year's 2nd round pick Andrew Makuba registered the lowest RAS score since Matt Pryor in 2018. He has not drafted a round one player with a RAS less than 9.2 in the last five drafts.

OMAR KHAN

GM PROFILE

- The Omar Khan profile is extremely fascinating so far in his three drafts
- So far Khan has shown to love athleticism, drafting premium positions and guys from big schools. Last season, Khan drafted seven players and six came from the Big 10. 12 of his 21 career selections have come from the Big 10 alone.
- Khan has targeted athletic players (2nd highest average RAS scores) and premium position players (2nd highest rate). All six of his round 1-2 selections have been at premium positions.
- The most interesting part of the Khan profile is how he telegraphs potential direction of his high picks even though they've drafted in the bottom half of rounds 1-2 in his three drafts. 15 of his 21 selections have come on players that he has met with prior to the draft, by far the highest rate among GMs. Incredibly, Khan has met with all 10 of his top three round picks prior to drafting them. No other GM is even in the ballpark of that rate.

JOHN SCHNEIDER

GM PROFILE

- Schneider has been an unconventional drafter for a number of years, drafting non-premium position players high and “over drafting” numerous players like Jordyn Brooks in 2020. When you compare some of Schneiders picks to consensus boards or use a data point like ESPNs Scouts Inc grades, he has drafted players well above expectations over a number of seasons.
- Schneider drafted WR D’wayne Eskeridge at 56 overall as an undersized WR from a MAC school, at age 24 who also posted a poor 6.7 RAS. That is the antithesis of a data driven selection and Eskeridge was a bust.
- Since 2016, there have been just 10 non-QBs players drafted in the top two rounds who were old prospects (>23 yo) and posted mediocre/poor athletic workouts (RAS <7.0). Schneider alone has drafted three of those players (Eskridge, LJ Collier and Jarran Reed).
- Since that terrible Eskeridge selection, Schneider has certainly reversed course and has hit on a number of top two round selections with players with more conventional profiles. Eight of the nine top two round selections since 2022 with a registered RAS score generated a RAS of 8.5+. 10/11 were under 23 yo and 9/11 under 22.5 yo. That has helped lead to some excellent early picks recently like Byron Murphy, Grey Zabel, Jaxson-Smith Njigba, Charles Cross and Nick Emmanwori.
- To his credit, Schneider has built two separate Super Bowl winning rosters so the man clearly knows what he is doing.

JOHN LYNCH

GM PROFILE

- Based on his style of drafting Lynch has proven to be the anti-thesis of new age analytics thinking. He is one of just three active GMs that rank below average in all three of these categories- age, athleticism, premium pick %.
- He has the 2nd lowest rate of drafting players under 22 years of age and 7th lowest rate of players with a RAS score of 9.0+. Lynch continues to lean toward drafting older players. 50% of his selections since 2019 have been on players age 23 or older, the highest rate among active GMs with more than two drafts under their belts.
- He has drafted a premium position player in round one in 8/9 career picks including seven straight. Unfortunately, although Bosa, Aiyuk and McGlinchey were good picks, he has completely whiffed on lots of rd 1 guys like Ruben Foster, Solomon Thomas, Javon Kinlaw and Trey Lance as well as most of his 2nd round pics to give him the worst hit rate in round 1-2 among active GMs. Four of his last five 2nd round picks have been on guys well over 23 years old and they've almost all been flops.
- Lynch just makes odd decisions. He has drafted a Punter in the 4th round and a Kicker in the 3rd round in recent seasons as well as five RBs in the last five drafts.
- Last year's selection of Mykel Williams was the first time since Nick Bosa in 2019 that Lynch has met with a player in the pre-draft process who he drafted in round 1. That is now 3 of 10 career first round picks that he has met with.

JASON LICHT

GM PROFILE

- Licht has proven himself to be one of the best drafting active GMs in the last 10 years. He has the 2nd best hit rate (avg annual value vs median) among GMs and ranks top seven for both offensive and defensive selections.
- No GM is more open to drafting non-Power 5 players than Licht. His 17% selection rate of non-power 5 conference players is highest among active GMs.
- Licht has only met with two of his last seven 1st round picks prior to drafting. However, in a bit of an oddity, he has met with six of his nine 3rd round picks since 2019, including five straight. That's the 2nd highest overall hit rate in the league.

ADAM PETERS

GM PROFILE

- Peters completed his 2nd draft in 2025 and so far, he has shown to be attracted to highly athletic players.
- Among his 12 selections with an available RAS, 8.29 (Jacoby Croskey-Merritt) was the lowest measured player. 67% of those selections measured at least a 9.0 RAS and the 9.2 average RAS is the highest among all GMs.
- Among his 9 1st and 2nd round selections, only TE Ben Sinnott in 2024 was a player drafted at a non-premium position.
- From round 3 on, no GM has drafted more older players than Peters. His average age of selection of 23.6 yo is by far the oldest set of picks among GMs and he has not drafted a single player outside of round 1-2 under the age of 22 yo.
- Again, small sample but so far, his two drafts rate as the best among all GMs in hit rate (Avg Annual Value by PFR.com vs avg in those rounds). Of course, Jayden Daniels was a big hit but guys like Brandon Coleman (rd 3) and Jacory Crosket-Merrit (rd6) have been big winners so far as well.
- It's still an extremely limited sample, with only two drafts under his belt, but both first round picks (Daniels, Connerly) met with the team the most times prior to drafting those players. WAS met with Daniels four times and Connerly twice (tied for most).
